Parent Time:

There seems to be one thing that parents universally agree on: parenting is hard. Some days we just don’t know what our next move should be. It is vital that we find a group of people who can sympathize with our struggles, encourage us, and offer wise advice. Our kids are no different. They, too, need voices in their lives that can speak truth and encouragement to them. Take some time to think about the teachers, coaches, church leaders, or family friends that you trust to positively influence your kids. How can you help build those relationships? Don’t be afraid to ask someone who shares a common interest with your child to invest a little more in him or her.
