PARENT TIME: In this season of life, it's so easy to get stuck in a rut. Between work, school, chores and kids' activities, it starts to feel like every day is just like the day before it. But if we each took a second to think back, we can remember having our own hobbies and interests. Many of us feel like we need to sacrifice ourselves to focus on our kids. And it's true that focused attention is great for our children. But is there also a way to show them how important it is to get involved in things that matter to us? Think about a cause that's meaningful to you. What can you do to get involved? Is there a way to include your kids? When we set the example, kids see first-hand how getting involved makes a big difference. Visit TheParentCue.org for more ideas.
