Jonathan was determined to help and protect David in any way he could. So, the two friends made a complicated plan.

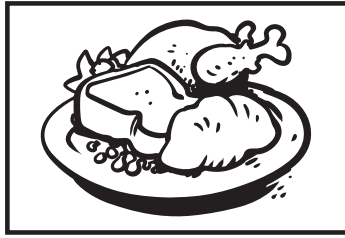

David went to hide instead of showing up for a feast, while Jonathan went to find out exactly how upset his father, King Saul, really was.

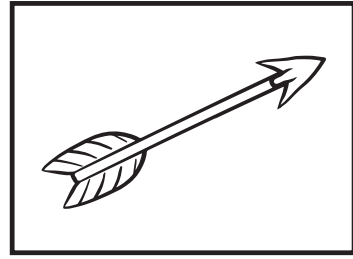

Jonathan shot arrows as a secret way to let David know how the conversation went. It didn't go well.

The friends met up one last time to say goodbye. They were so sad, but David had to go or else King Saul would kill him.

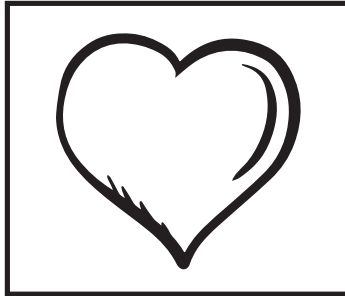

David promised to be kind to Jonathan's family no matter what.

Jonathan could've refused to be friends with David—he was keeping him from getting to be king AND causing problems for his family. But he chose kindness and friendship. Eventually, David got to show kindness to Jonathan's family too, just like he had promised.
